TOKYO, Oct. 7 (AP)—Prime Minister Ichiro Hatoyama left for Moscow today to try to end the 11-year-old state of war between Japan and Russia and restore normal diplomatic relations.

Cheerful and optimistic, the ailing 73-year-old Prime Minister told a crowd at Tokyo's International Airport, "I will return after having successfully concluded my mission."

Before his departure, Hatoyama conferred with Allen W. Dulles, chief of the United States Central Intelligence Agency, who flew to Tokyo yesterday on a two-month global tour. Details of their talk were not disclosed.
